

Star Wars

By Joanne Grimm

One could say that holding this convention in May was a serendipitous choice. You see, May, besides being Honor Nurses Month and Eat More Blueberries Month, is also National Recommitment Month - a time to remember and think about what is important to us and to recommit ourselves to those things. During the last packed hours together we have, through the very action of being here, recommitted ourselves to the mission of Alpha Delta Kappa. And today, May 4th, is National Renewal Day - a day to renew our commitments and to begin again.

May brings us Mothers' Day, El Cinco De Mayo, Memorial Day, and the yearly outbreak of vacation trips. May 4th is also Star Wars Day. You could say why May 4th, since the first movie came out on May 24, 1977? Here's a bit of trivia to share with your students when you are pointing out to them the importance of sentence structure. A German newspaper translated the well know phrase, "May the force be with you" into "We are with you on May fourth.

Let us "alert all commands" - that means the following is an Imperial Order - and commit ourselves to a biennium that is as "smooth as the surface of a neutron star." Oh, yes, and May the Force Be With You.